

Abstract of the Disclosure

A device for controlling a multi-stage or dual igniter airbag in motor vehicles having a common bypass circuit which only contains one resistor for use by multiple circuits within an airbag switch simultaneously. The preferred embodiment includes use of one or more additional circuits to filter out induced electromagnetic waves, such as radio waves, thereby reducing the possibility of unintentional airbag detonation.